MOTION TO VACATE SUMMARY EVICTION ORDER, TENANT'S AFFIDAVIT/DECLARATION IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO VACATE SUMMARY EVICTION ORDER, and ORDER VACATING SUMMARY EVICTION TENANT INSTRUCTIONS (Forms #23, #24 and #25)

INTRODUCTION

This information explains how to file a Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction Order, Form #23. Use this Motion if you have failed to file a Tenant's Affidavit/Declaration and therefore are in default. If you have received a summary eviction order, the Motion to Vacate will allow a judge to stop or delay the constable/sheriff from locking you out. You must file this Motion to Vacate with the Justice Court clerk as quickly as possible, preferably before the 24-hour lockout notice has ended. If you have already received the 24-hour lockout notice, any delay in filing may result in your eviction.

LEGAL REQUIREMENTS

Nevada law allows a tenant to file a Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction Order in response to a summary eviction order. If you have not received a summary eviction order (also called the 24-hour lockout order), you cannot file a Motion to Vacate. If you did not receive a copy of the order, ask your Justice Court clerk or the constable/sheriff for a copy of the order.

If your Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction Order is granted, the judge should stop the eviction and schedule a hearing to hear your side of the case. Generally, a judge should grant a Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction Order if evidence can establish (1) a reasonable basis for your not responding to an eviction notice or not appearing at the hearing and (2) a prompt response by you, like a Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction Order. For example, if you did not receive a copy of an eviction notice prior to receiving the summary eviction order, and you filed your Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction Order within a day of receiving your summary eviction order, then you would probably satisfy the legal requirements for a Motion to vacate. If you received a prior eviction notice, like a 5-Day Pay Rent or Quit Notice or a 3-Day Nuisance Notice, a judge may also require a legal defense to the eviction notice.

The judge has the authority to deny your Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction Order and to allow the eviction order to stand. It is important to provide the judge with a reasonable basis for granting the Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction.

The Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction Order covers three specific situations:

- 1. When you have not received an eviction notice;
- 2. When you have received an eviction notice and have a legal defense to the action; and
- 3. When you have missed your summary eviction hearing.

This form cannot possibly address all of the possible reasons for filing a Motion to Vacate. For those situations, you can write in any other excuse or justification. If you think you do not have a legal basis for filing a Motion to Vacate and just want more time, consider filing a Motion to Stay Eviction Order, Form #26.

FILING FEES

You will list all of your income (earnings, rental income and government checks) plus your assets (real property, bank accounts, motor vehicles, etc.) and expenses (rent, utilities, insurance, childcare, credit card payments, car payments, etc.) on this form. (See the specific instructions involved with this process – Forms #37, #38 and #39.) When you complete the Application to Waive Fees and Costs, file your Motion with it. The court will not officially file your Motion until either (1) the judge grants your Application to Waive Fees and Costs (and gives you an Order Regarding Waiver of Fees and Costs, Form #39) or (2) you pay the filing fee. Once you have completed the paper work, file it with the Justice Court as soon as possible.

FILING WITH THE JUSTICE COURT

Once you have completed the forms, you must file them with the Justice Court where your hearing was held. You will need the original and two copies of the Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction Order. You must mail one of the copies to your landlord.

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT?

Filing a Motion to Vacate Summary Eviction Order does not guarantee that the judge will stop or delay the eviction. The judge must review the paperwork and make a decision. Ask the clerk how long this will take or what you should do to find out the judge's decision as quickly as possible. The court may deny your Motion (and they frequently do) and you be may evicted without any further notice. Or, you may be evicted before the court considers your Motion. Stay in touch with the court clerk. Usually, you will have some advance notice of the judge's decision. Finally, if your Motion is denied, your only recourse is to appeal the summary eviction order. Your Motion to Vacate may take a few days to be decided and may mean that you miss your time to appeal the summary eviction order. You have only ten (10) judicial days to make an appeal of your summary eviction order and a decision on your Motion to Vacate may take longer than ten (10) judicial days. Carefully consider which course of action you want to take. You may want to consult with an attorney before making a decision.

If the judge decides to grant your request for an Order to Vacate, the court will schedule a hearing. You must appear at the hearing and present your arguments and legal defenses as to why the summary eviction should not be granted.
